Conditions for the acceptance of your service dog in the cabin

Trained service dogs that assist a passenger in certain functions are allowed to travel in the aircraft cabin without cost. Your dog should fit on the floor space in front of your seat and may not impede the legroom of other guests or obstruct aisles or emergency exits. If there is no suitable space to accommodate a large dog in the cabin, the dog can be transported in the hold at no extra charge provided you have a suitable kennel with you. Trained dogs behave appropriately in public and immediately follow the instructions of their owners. If this is not the case, you may be asked for details of the training and behavior of the dog. If your service dog does not behave properly, it can be refused in the cabin. The dog must wear a harness and be secured to your seatbelt during the entire flight. Etihad Airways recommends you to request transport of your service dog at least 48 hours before departure. Please contact Etihad Airways for questions and additional information. The restrictions on travelling with animals can differ per country. Guests are responsible for arranging any necessary formalities.
